According to remodeler Victor Farina of Farina & Sons, specialty finishes, natural materials and custom design features are very important in homes right now. Specializing in large scale renovations and custom homes, he sees that clients are drawn to designs and materials to make their homes unique and reflect their personal tastes.

The home shown here is an example of a renovation that encompasses numerous textures and natural selections favored by the homeowners, including:

- Maple-stained ceiling treatments, custom-stained birch flooring, custom-built and stained cabinets for the home office, and pine ceilings outdoors
- Granite and marble countertops in kitchen, bathrooms and den
- Plaster ceiling treatments and walls
- Iron front door
- Natural Ledge stone, used in dining room, waterfall surround and fireplace
- A waterfall wall in the great room
- Lighting selections vary throughout to enhance ambience and spotlight special design features
- Foam insulation, energy-efficient windows and central controls for electrical, security and audio to make the home convenient and comfortable
